

Nikola Matković

Front-end web developer

I became interested in technology in elementary school. I spent a lot of time trying out many technologies and programming languages, but I saw myself as a future front-end web developer. This is the area I have paid the most attention to. I enjoy learning new technologies and acquiring new skills. I know the concepts of object-oriented programming such as polymorphism, inheritance and working with modules.

I like to cooperate with colleagues and hear the opinion of others on further work on the projects. I actively use github when working with a team. GNU/Linux is my daily driver and I'm enjoying while using open source software.

Education:

- Started front-end web development code camp at center NIT - 2022
- Started studying software engineering at State university of Novi Pazar - 2021
- Finished high school - 2021

Technologies that I use:
